

JEAN-CLAUDE VANNIER

Eight years after meeting at a Serge Gainsbourg retrospective (he arranged Gainsbourg's Histoire de Melody Nelson), Vannier and Patton collaborated. "I would send Mike rough versions of my songs and then wait. He made my music awaken with his unique perspective and interpretations."

JOHN ERIK KAADA

"The kind of horror music you'd expect Terry Gilliam to use for a scene set in a tattered den of sin full of toothless smiles and jaundiced skin. At times manically percolating and at others depressingly morose, this is the soundtrack for a life surrendered to pleasure" - TMT

JOHN ZORN

"He would give me direction in the studio, like, 'Improvise this part,'" Patton recalls of his early Zorn sessions. "I'm like, 'Improvise, what does that even mean? I'm a singer, I've got parts.' He was just like, 'No. No parts.'" - Rolling Stone

LOVAGE

Lovage is Dan the Automator (as Nathaniel Merriweather), Mike Patton and Jennifer Charles on vocals, and Kid Koala on turntables and samples. The vinyl has become quite expensive, for reasons.

MALDOROR

Artist, author and actual noise god Masami Akita aka Merzbow got together with Patton in Tokyo in 1997 to record some stuff together. It will break your speakers.

MELT-BANANA

Japanese grindcore nutters who opened up for Mr Bungle on tour in the nineties and went on to open for various Patton-fronted bands for many years. Despite this minor love affair they collaborated just once, in typically unhinged fashion.

MIKE PATTON

"In my early 20s, I had got to the point when I realised all I had played in were rock bands and thought I could do other things with my voice and put it into contexts that have nothing to do with rock music at all."

Debut	1996
